TROPICAL FOREST WALK & SECRET GROTTA

Lifou Island, New Caledonia

New Caledonia boasts more than 2,400 species of indigenous plants. Some are used to treat ailments while others contain toxins that are sometimes added to rivers to temporarily paralyse fish so they can easily be caught. This is the type of engaging information that the guide will provide on your leisurely walk through a tropical forest. Later, you will explore a grotto by torchlight so you can see the odd shapes of the stalagmites and stalactites. You will also learn how the Melanese use traditional methods to gather coconut crabs, trap birds and hunt wild pigs.

CUZCO & MACHU PICCHU

Lima/Machu Picchu (Callao), Peru

Machu Picchu may be the most significant legacy of the Inca civilisation, as it was left largely intact after being abandoned in the 1500s. The lost city's purpose remains a mystery, which makes Machu Picchu's remote mountainous setting all the more bewitching. The time spent among the hundreds of sacred and mystifying ruins leaves an indelible memory, especially after seeing the craftsmanship of the Inca stonemasons in Cuzco. Its Sacsayhuaman fortress was constructed with 100-tonne stones so perfectly shaped that a blade of grass can't slide between them.
